

People To Watch in 2010

THE OTTAWA CITIZEN JANUARY 3, 2010

ABOUT THE PEOPLE: From left to right, here are the people you'll meet in the Citizen during the next week: Rafal Rohozinski; What's next for the security whiz after cracking a worldwide cyber-spy scheme last year?; Peter Allen; Can DragonWave's CEO lead an area high-tech resurgence?; Dr. Jeffrey Turnbull; How will the doctor to Ottawa's street people reshape the Canadian Medical Association?; Hamdi Mohamed; Can this immigrant advocate get Ottawans to reimagine their city for the 21st century?; Erik Gudbranson; Will the big defenceman from Orléans be one of the top 10 picks in this year's NHL draft?; Kyrie Kristmanson; Is 2010 the breakout year for this 20-year-old singer whose 2009 was already so stellar?; Janice Barresi; Can she really raise $750,000 in a year for a foundation that is only a few days old?; Yasir Naqvi; Will the young and ambitious MPP who never sleeps make it to cabinet at Queen's Park?; Geoff Green; Can his tours to polar regions educate young people in time to save the world?; Graham Richardson; How will he fill the shoes of Max Keeping, CTV Ottawa's anchor of 37 years?; Chris Herdman; What can he learn about the brain by having pilots 'fly' in his gigantic simulator?; Moe Garahan {Not shown}; Is this her year to make sure all Ottawans have access to healthy and affordable food?

Photograph by: Julie Oliver, The Ottawa Citizen, The Ottawa Citizen

Starting today on page A6, and during the next week, meet 12 inspiring Ottawans whose ideas are driving the future -- around the corner and around the world

videos, photos and profiles at ottawacitizen.com/people

About the Photo

The Citizen's People to Watch were photographed on Dec. 17 by Julie Oliver in the Canadian Museum of Nature, which is set to unveil its five-year renovation in May. Seen through the giant arches of the original front window, they're standing in the sleek new glass tower, dubbed the 'lantern.' Despite their busy schedules, our People to Watch bravely donned construction boots, hardhats and goggles to safely make their way past an army of workers finishing floors and myriad other details. Once construction is done, the exhibits will move in.

To get a behind-the-scenes glimpse of the museum and the photo shoot, see the video at ottawacitizen.com/people

Read about the museum on page A6

© Copyright (c) The Ottawa Citizen